WARNINGS: Laws being written to screw you.

I work on a security commission and I've just received word to start campaigning on a campaign we've been working on for the last two months and now it all makes sense.

I'll keep it as short can I can

They're going to pin this event on a male late teens to early 20s and say he did it because he's unstable. They are going to find firearms and a NRA book in his home. They are going to say he used reloading powder for the explosion and that reloading powder shouldn't be for sale to the public. They are then going to say that because the powder in ammunition can be used for explosions that the number of rounds you can buy should be limited and taxed to help pay for these events.

I can't do anything or I'll lose my job and possibly face criminal charges. Please don't let them get away with it. They won't find the suspect till later this week and the raid is issued to occur on Friday. This was a staged event. The people hurt are real but the event was planned. Don't let them hurt our rights.

I'm at work so I used a copy of a picture from another thread. Also please don't mention me. It will seriously hurt me.

Suspect 2 Not Injured

'He got closer and realized that one of the retention straps had literally been cut. There was a small amount of blood or what appeared to be blood on the tarp, he grabbed his step ladder to kind of look in side...he basically stuck his head under the tarp, noticed a pool of blood... something crumpled up in the forward portion.' - CNN Video interview

The next time we see the suspect his face and shirt are covered in blood

Blood spilling all over everything in ambulance

No blood anywhere inside of the boat. not one drop, certainly not a 'pool'

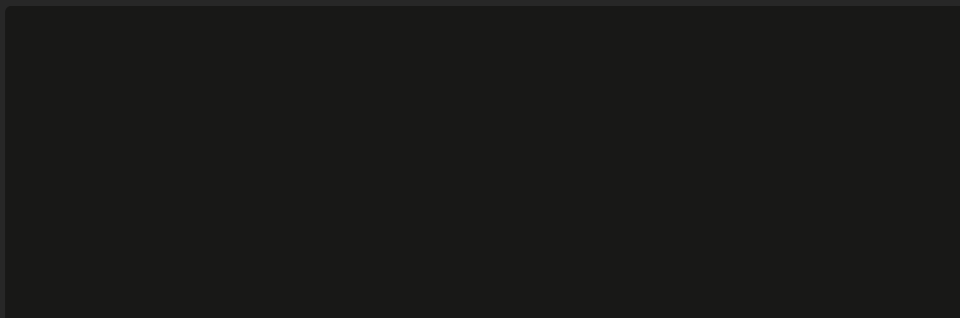

only blood is on the step he used to exit, and it is not there before he exits.
